Performance Management is a continuous process of communicating and clarifying job responsibilities, priorities and performance expectations in order to ensure mutual understanding between the supervisor and the employee.

Rensselaer values and encourages employee development through a style of management which provides frequent feedback and fosters teamwork.
4 Steps to Successful Performance Management Evaluations

STEP 1. Prepare Yourself

- Approximately 2 weeks before the meeting
  - Evaluate your own performance as a manager.
  - Solicit information from peers, other managers, and customers about the employee’s performance.
  - Gather helpful documentation (notes on performance, disciplinary action documentation, training documentation).

STEP 2. Prepare the Employee

- Approximately 1 week before the meeting
  - Work with the employee to set a date, time and place for the evaluation discussion.
  - Send the employee written confirmation of the meeting.
  - Ask the employee to complete a self-evaluation and submit it to you 2 to 3 days before the meeting.

STEP 3. Conduct the Meeting

- Control the environment
  - Privacy.
  - No interruptions.
  - Allow enough time.
  - Put the employee at ease.

- Overview the process
  - State the purpose and format of the Performance Evaluation.

- Discuss the employee’s self-evaluation
  - Get the employee to discuss openly by using open-ended questions.
  - Use active listening and don’t interrupt.

STEP 4. Following-up

- Discuss merit increase with employee, if applicable
- Work with the employee to schedule any training or professional development agreed upon during the evaluation.
- If the employee receives a rating of Developing or Improvement Essential on his/her evaluation, schedule a follow-up meeting within 6 months to re-evaluate performance.

Defining Performance Standards

Performance standards provide the employee with specific performance expectations for each major duty. They are the observable behaviors and actions which explain how the job is to be done, plus the results that are expected for satisfactory job performance. The purpose of performance standards is to communicate expectations. Keep in mind that good performance typically involves more than technical expertise.

Performance standards are:
- Based on the position, not the individual.
- Observable, specific indicators of success.
- Meaningful, reasonable and attainable.
- Describe “fully satisfactory” performance once trained.
- Expressed in terms of Quantity, Quality, Timeliness, Cost, or Outcomes.

In determining performance standards, consider the following:
- What does a good job look like?
- How many or how much is needed?
- How long should it take?
- When are the results needed?
- How accurate or how good is acceptable?
- Are there budget considerations?
- Are there safety considerations?
- Are there legislative or regulatory requirements that require strict adherence?
- Are there behaviors that are expected in your department to promote teamwork, leadership, creativity, customer service?
- What results would be considered satisfactory?
- What condition will exist when the duty is well performed?
- What is the difference between good and poor performance?
